

Classes at Farmstead Arts

When NJ Film School closed, I took a two-year break from teaching to focus on making my sci-fi feature, The Strange Dark. Now that it's complete and getting distributed, I'm excited to return to teaching.

I've found a fantastic new location, Farmstead Arts, where I can continue to offer a select group of classes as well as new workshops.

Farmstead Arts is an artist's community, offering a variety of classes with a beautiful and inspiring location to take them.

I'm thrilled to be joining the teaching faculty at Farmstead Arts and I hope I'll see you there.

Where is Farmstead Arts?

Farmstead Arts is nestled beside the Passaic River on four acres that are part of the 40-acre Farmstead park in Basking Ridge, NJ at 450 King George Road (only 15 minutes from our original location in New Providence).

What classes are you offering?

To start, I will be offering ten-week Screenwriting classes, but I will be adding more over time.

How do I register?

All registrations are at: FarmsteadArts.org

Will there be one-day workshops?

Yes. There will be a variety of workshops added to the schedule on topics like: Casting, Directing, Film Festivals, and more.

Do you offer private lessons?

Yes. I have a private studio at Farmstead arts and can meet for one-on-one consultations, script analysis, and writing/editing assignments.

Please do not hesitate to contact me with any other questions.
